U. S. ARMY AIR FORCES

Hi Slugger,

I don't know how long it's been since I've written you, but anyhow I owe you this one. I can tell me you're 'bout ready to go. You should be leaving PDQ, no? I'll lay 3-1 odds you go to Sheppard for your basic. Don't hesitate to ask me about anything. I sure don't profess to know it all, but I think I can help separate the ol' shit out. Believe me, you'll get more shit thrown at you by your buddies & your officers than anyone ever threw at you for the first 18 yrs of your life. If you're wondering about Cadets, I can give you any dope on that. After you get to Shep. you have a week of processing of which they spend 6 3/4 days inspecting you pecker. You'll get more short arms than Heinz has pickles! After your week of processing, you'll be assigned to a barracks & a training group. About a wk & a half after processing is thru, you'll get your tests to determine whether or not you make Cadets. Before this you get an I. Q. test at Sheridan (this one is very im-important!) another something like it & a bunch of radio & mechanic aptitude tests. These aren't your Cadet tests. They are for determining your status in the event you fail to make Cadets. Except the I Q at Sher. That baby along with the Cadet tests will follow you wherever you go. The Cadet tests will last 2½ days about. One whole day straight is spent writing on about 8 dif. subjects, Math, Map Reading, Instrument Reading Aptitude, Mechanics, oh hell, about 15 others. Most are aptitude tho. In other words, how well you can look at a bunch of instruments you prob. never saw before in your life & how fast you can look this readings up on a chart. Do these accurately, but do 'em fast. Don't worry about the psycologist. He's just a brass hat who washes out anybody who's dumb enuff to tell him he's ever fainted or been knocked out for more 'n a minute. Don't tell that bastard anything! The other part of the test is the motor test. You'll only spend about 1¼ hrs. in that plane. You have to turn pegs with one hand. You have to follow a little disc about the size of a quarter on a record-like machine. You have to work left-handed threads on a similar machine & try to keep a little peg on a disc. This one'll fuck you up, but don't dispair. You have to click off lights with all the speed you got. When a certain combination of red-green lites appear, a certain switch has to be clicked. It's not hard after you get the hang of it. Also you set in a cockpit-like seat & work & line up lites with a stick & pedals. Be sure to line up the same set first each time your lites change. If you don't, you'll get mixed up. Your last motor test is a link trainer you keep on a bulls eye target. Work the pedals easy on this one. The first bunch to be notified will be listed about 3 days after you're thru with the tests. These boys will make their 2nd choice. A week or more later, two more lists will be sent out. One will be scheduled to go to a movie. These boys are future gunners. The other list are men who made first choice (pilots mostly). About half the barracks will make Cadets. A little over half of these will be pilot or better qualified. You must score a 6 to make pil. or bombardier & a 7 to make navigator. You'll have no way of finding out what your score is until just before you ship. Even then, if you make it, you may not be allowed to see the scores. If you make it, however, when you get to your next field you will find out for sure. I just found mine out a few days ago. I got 8 for nav. & bomb. & a 7 for pilot. The highest score you can get is a 9. Last yr. you only needed 3 & 4 to make it, now, 6 or 7. That's tough shit for us, I guess. But you & Arch should be able to crack it if this little durun shit did. You sure as hell better! In 3 months I hope to be shipping to pre-flight. If a guy ever gets thru pre-flight & primary, he gad-dam sure has a pretty fair chance of going all the way. The woman situation is poor as usual down here & I haven't got muff time except to droal anyway. There are a few nice little chicks tho. The Texas women are really built, tho. I'd like to get chummy with one sometime as they are friendly & always hot.

Well, dammit, this sure as hell better last you for a coon's age. Now keep those letters a' comin'! You'll prob. get this at Shep. again but here's an accurate discription of the army in 7 easy words, every one of which is quite true: "Wait, hurry, skin it back & sign here!" Well, I'll rest my weary fingers now as I've got to go to class. Bye for now.

The Goldbricker, Dick.
